HIV LAWS IMPOSING CRIMINAL PENALTIES (31 total)

Each state or territory, in addition to the federal government, that has an HIV-specific misdemeanor or felony law for one or more of the behaviors below qualifies as a state or territory with an HIV law imposing criminal penalties. A law is HIV-specific if it explicitly targets HIV, whether or not it targets other diseases as well. Where not otherwise noted, these laws appear in criminal codes. In some jurisdictions, some or all of these HIV-specific laws imposing criminal penalties appear in public health codes; these 11 jurisdictions are marked with Ω.

Idaho Ω	Yes	Yes	Yes ★	Yes		Felony		Misdemeanor				While Idaho does not include hepatitis alongside HIV in its exposure law, the state does have a statute indicating it is unlawful for anyone infected with hepatitis B virus (HBV) to "knowingly expose another person." HIV, syphilis, gonorrhea, and chlamydia are also included in this same law. Subsequent code sections specify, first, misdemeanor penalties for syphilis and gonorrhea, and, secondly, felony penalties for HIV. Thus, penalties for HBV are not specified, making it unclear how exactly exposure to HBV is treated under the law.

JURISDICTION

Virginia										Felony	Yes	Yes
Washington Ω	Yes					Felony, Misdemeanor					Yes		Washington's misdemeanor exposure statute appears in the health code and does not require sex offender registration (SOR). The criminal first-degree assault statute, however, imposes felony penalties for transmitting HIV to a child or vulnerable adult. Only this offense requires SOR.
West Virginia									Misdemeanor				West Virginia's general STI law imposes a maximum penalty of $100 and 30 days imprisonment for exposing another to a venereal disease, without specifically naming any STIs. However, West Virginia's STD Program monitors both HIV and hepatitis B virus (HBV), among other STIs, and this offers some indication that exposing others to either HIV or HBV could be punished under the law.
Wisconsin					Yes	Felony			Misdemeanor			Yes	Wisconsin's aggravating factors statute includes HIV by name as well as "sexually transmitted disease."
Wyoming
American Samoa
Guam				Yes		Felony
Northern Mariana Islands
Puerto Rico
U.S. Virgin Islands	Yes		Yes ★	Yes		Felony							Cohabiting with another while knowingly "afflicted with venereal disease" carries a punishment of up to 180 days imprisonment under the health code.

* Where a state's only HIV-specific law imposing criminal penalties is a sentence enhancement or aggravating factor for a sex offense, a felony designation here simply denotes that the enhancement pertains to a felony.

† The only laws included in these columns are those under public health codes that impose criminal punishment for exposure or transmission of STIs including HIV or STIs in general (not laws that impose other measures for HIV or STIs, or laws that impose criminal punishment for not following health orders). These laws are predominantly misdemeanors. Oregon's law is a class C felony.

‡ The only states included here are those where there have been reported charges and/or convictions for non-HIV-specific offenses, where positive HIV status was relevant in establishing a (non-HIV-specific) element of the offense.

§ In Tennessee, a person living with hepatitis B or C virus convicted of criminal exposure (via sexual, needle sharing, or organ/tissue/blood/semen donation exposure) is required to register as a sex offender. People living with HIV are required to register for this offense as well, and they are also required to register if convicted of aggravated prostitution (Tennessee's HIV-specific sex work law).

★ These jurisdictions have provisions specifically criminalizing syringe sharing or sale by PLHIV, most of which impose felony penalties. This is in contrast to states with HIV-specific laws that do not explicitly target this type of exposure, but contain language that can be (and in some cases has been) applied to syringe sharing or sale.
